

Want to make the most of your family travels?

You've come to the right place.

SEARCH

Home » Community » Blogs » A Day in Princeton, New Jersey

A Day in Princeton, New Jersey

Font size:

- By Allison Tibaldi
- Published: 22 February, 2010
- Tags: teens edu-cation kids

No Shortage of Fine Dining

You won't leave Princeton hungry. Stand in line with hungry co-eds at PJ'S Pancake House (154 Nassau Street) and you will be rewarded with giant portions of breakfast classics and the chance to mingle with locals and students.

The Yankee Doodle Tap Room is located in Princeton's most historical hotel, the gracious Nassau Inn (Palmer Square). The restaurant is named for its giant Norman Rockwell mural of Yankee Doodle, which hangs over the impressive oak bar. It has a cozy and inviting atmosphere, and the food and service are first rate. We dined on Chilean sea bass, expertly prepared and beautifully served. We had fun looking at the initials that now famous Princeton grads had carved into the wood of the old-fashioned booths when they dined here as students. This stately hotel is the place to stay in Princeton, and it is convenient to all the sites.

Princeton has no shortage of coffee shops and casual establishments. We enjoyed a snack at Panera's, our favorite chain restaurant, which is located on Nassau Street. We noticed a good variety of ethnic restaurants, including Indian, Japanese and Mexican.

Enjoying the Collegiate Air

There is quite a lot to do in Princeton, but we really enjoyed strolling the town at a leisurely pace, enjoying its quiet tree-lined streets, great shops and soaking up the collegiate air. Though it was January, the weather was